Management

B Management #62 ended on 4 November with what is apparently developing into a tradition-- going overtime on the last day of the course. A number of students were asked whether they felt the course should be lengthened to enable us to cover the material more leisurely. They were torn between the desire to dig more intensively into management problems in class and the facts of management life, at work. Most felt that lengthening the course might hurt attendance. This class was so interested that ten out of twelve requested copies of selected articles for their retention.

B 1. Messrs. [REDACTED] met with Mr. Paul Borel, AD/OCR, on 8 November to discuss the scheduling of an OCR Management Conference. Mr. Borel was obviously prepared to go ahead with a conference as soon as possible. The only questions still to be settled are when, and who will participate. The conference will include a vertical slice of OCR--participants will come from at least four levels of OCR management.
